Mother's Influence On Son

THE old saying, "Like mother like son," is historically correct. Henry IV. of Germany became a miserable prince, but blessed with a wise mother, Louis IX. of France grew up to be a man of God. A distinguished writer has called attention to the fact that of the 49 monarchs who have worn the French crown, only three have loved the people, and all these three were reared by their mothers. St. Louis was trained by Blanche; Louis XII. by Marie of Cleves, and Henry IV. by Jeanne d'Albret; and these three were really the fathers of their people.

Sir Walter Scott's mother was a superior woman, a lover of poetry and painting. Byron's worst enemy was his mother—she was proud and ill-tempered. The mother of Napoleon was of superior mind and deep piety. The mother of Nero was a murderer. The mother of Patrick Henry was marked by superior conversational powers. The mother of the Wealeys was distinguished for her intellectual powers and executive ability, so that she has been called "the mother of Methodism."

Mothers Train Great Men.
Mothers have trained our presidents and statesmen. Washington's father died when George was only 12 years old. Jefferson, Madison, Jackson and Harrison the elder were all reared by their mothers. Tyler, Hayes and Cleveland depended upon their widowed mothers for their training. Abraham Lincoln confessed among his most pleasant reminiscences were those of his excellent mother, to whom he imputed the best and brightest qualities he had inherited. Lincoln also owned that it was his stepmother, more than any other person, that made him the man he was.

Gen. Grant's mother went into a room at a certain hour each day during the war to pray for her husband. President McKinley left the capital and the affairs of state to watch at the side of his dying mother, to receive her last blessing and to give her his last kiss. Garfield's father died when the future president was a babe. On the day of his inauguration he turned away from all the representatives of kings and queens, and from all the great men and beautiful women who had gathered to do him honor, and the first thing he did after he had taken the oath of office was to kiss the wrinkled face of his mother and said: "Mother, you have brought me to this."

Remembered His Prayers.
John Quincy Adams, till the day of his death, said the little prayer his mother taught him, "Now I lay me down to sleep," Daniel Webster's mother first fostered the abilities which ultimately made him so long distinguished.

If the world was lost through woman, she alone can save it. The future of society is in the hands of the mothers.

The mother in her office holds the key of the soul; and she it is who stamps the coin of character.

Our homes have made America peerless among the nations. Any encyclopedia of American biography will

NOTICED BALD SPOT COMING ON HEAD

Interesting Story of Consultation with Dermatologist and Successful Use of Cuticura. Also Case of Severe
Ivy Poisoning, Relief of Which by Cuticura was Permanent.

"Nine years ago I noticed a bald spot coming on my head and, as I was only fifteen years old, it did not seem natural, as it was on the side of my head instead of on top. My mother advised my seeing a dermatologist and I did so, one of the best in Boston, and he said it was due to a germ I must have got at the barber's. He couldn't assure a cure, but by treating each hair separately by electricity, he said, the hair might come out white or gray, if it came out at all. He proposed giving me a treatment every month for six months at ten dollars a treatment. When I told my mother she advised using Cuticura and this I did, using Cuticura Soap and Ointment every day. In two months my hair commenced to grow, and in six months one would never have known there had been any trouble, the hair coming out being black, the exact shade of my own. I have never had any trouble since, and feel I can't say half enough for Cuticura. "Another member of our family was terribly poisoned by poison ivy and every summer for six years the blisters came, bursting and causing great suffering. We tried everything recommended by the best physicians, but with no good result. Finally we tried Cuticura and obtained relief in a very short time which was permanent. She has never had any trouble since, so Cuticura is invaluable to us, you see. G. J. Browne, 1 Remington St., Dorchester, Mass., Jan. 29, 1910."

crying over them like a child. She never rose so high in her royalty as when she knelt, a simple mother, crying over her children at the altar of God. English ships and soldiers and gold and colonies are incidents; the real secret of a nation's greatness is a sanctified motherhood. The Anglo-Saxon people will continue to march to the mastery of the world and be the teachers of truth, the arbiters of right and the proclaimers of peace, so long as they shall hold woman in loftiest regard and preserve the purity of the home.

France Needs Mothers.
Napoleon recognized the fostering influence of the home when he said: "What France wants is good mothers, and you may be sure then that France will have good sons." God has put into the hands of parents, at their own free will, a power greater than that which presidents and kings and queens wield and which issue either in the weal or woe of their children.

MILLIONAIRE CORPORAL DISCHARGED

Fails to Win Coveted Commission; Is "Bottled" From Army.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 3.—Instead of a commission in the army, Albert J. Meyer, "the millionaire corporal," gets a "bottled" discharge out of the army. He only escaped a term of imprisonment for a serious breach of discipline by the leniency of Maj.-Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, the reviewing authority of his court martial proceedings.

Meyer is the grandson of General Albert Meyer, a civil war veteran for whom fort Meyer was named, is wealthy and by reason of the family's high social standing, a social favorite in Boston and Washington. When he began to think of an army career he found West Point closed to him on account of his age, but undaunted he enlisted, won his corporal's stripes in a year, and seemed in a fair way of gaining a commission.

Mingles With Officers in Society.
When he took his leave home in the evening he would don evening clothes and be whirled away to the most exclusive and brilliant social functions in Washington in a hired automobile.

At dances and dinners corporal Meyer met on equal footing, the officers from fort Meyer, and the higher officers stationed at Washington, and one one occasion sat at the right of the chief of staff of the army at a dinner.

Meyer went away on a furlough early in the summer and remained over his time, finally reporting at Fort Banks, Mass., in order to avoid arrest as a deserter. He was ordered back to fort Meyer, but failed to report and was promptly arrested and court-martialed. The court found him guilty of being absent without leave.

Conservatism Is Keynote Of New Hampshire Republicans

HON. CLARENCE E. CARR,
Democratic Nominee.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 3.—No such situation exists in the Granite state as the Bay state has found on its hands, with candidates galore clamoring for recognition as the only original claimant for the governorship nomination and finally with the Republicans sitting tight grinning at the Kilkenney cat racket going on in the Democratic ranks. While there was trouble presaged at first in the New Hampshire Republican convention, the progressives secured control and ex-senator William E. Chandler wrote the platform. It is what he calls "conservatively progressive."

The Democrats put the initiative and referendum into their platform, while the Republicans hold that the initiative and referendum can only be made law through the constitution, as has been decided by the courts. In other words, the state constitution will have to be amended before the initiative and referendum can be adopted.

The Republican Candidate.
Hon. Robert P. Bass, Republican candidate for governor of New Hampshire, chosen at the Republican primaries, is a descendant of one of the families who early settled New Hampshire, members of which have been prominent in the state's development. His father was a lawyer of marked ability in Chicago. He was a friend of Abraham Lincoln and conducted the latter's campaign for the presidential nomination in Illinois in 1860. He was appointed United States district attorney for northern Illinois in recognition of his services. He remained in Chicago for 13 years and then came back to New Hampshire to live. His son, Robert, the present candidate, graduated from Harvard in 1896 and attended the Harvard law school. He became interested in forestry through the development of large tracts of forest land he owned and in 1904 governor MacLane appointed him on the state forestry commission. He is largely responsible for the enactment of a progressive forestry law in New Hampshire. He has served in the legislature for two terms and a year in the state senate. He is a resident of Peterboro.

Carr's Family Prominent.
Hon. Clarence E. Carr of Andover, N. H., Democratic nominee for governor of New Hampshire, was born at Enfield, N. H., in 1855, and has always been a citizen of New Hampshire. He comes of old New England stock and his ancestors have been men of standing and influence in the state. His father was a successful manufacturer and his mother was a daughter of Robert Cochran, Esq. He is a graduate of academies in Andover, New London and Meriden, N. H., and of the Chandler scientific department of Dartmouth college in 1875. He read law in the office of Hon. John M. Shirley of Andover and was taken into partnership with the latter in 1877, before his admission to the bar in 1878. He retired from practice in 1882, but has been engaged in manufacturing and has served in the New Hampshire house of representatives. He was president of the Democratic state convention in 1902 and has been since a member of the Democratic state committee. He was defeated for governor in 1908 by only 3200 votes, when Taft carried the whole state by 19,500. He is one of the trustees of the Pearson estate, having in charge a fund of a half million dollars for the benefit of his poor and needy of New Hampshire. He is a Mason and a member of the Grange. It is his boast that in his factory, with which he has been connected since 1860 that men are working there who began there 30 and 40 years ago, and that there has never been a strike in that time. He has two sons at Harvard, one a recent captain of the baseball and hockey teams.

Courtesy As a Business Asset

By ELBERT HUBBARD

GEORGE PEABODY, the great American banker, had one thing which will make any man or woman rich. The asset to which I refer is the charm of manner.

Its first requisite is glowing physical health.

The second ingredient is absolute honesty.

To the clerk who would succeed, I say, cultivate charm of manner.

Courteous manners in little things are an asset worth acquiring. When a customer approaches, greet him with a chair. Step aside and let the store's guest pass into the elevator; these are little things, but they make you and your work finer.

To give visitors or to give short, sharp, flippant answers, even to stupid or impudent people, is a great mistake. Meet rudeness with unflinching patience and politeness and see how much better you feel.

Your promise to a customer is your employer's promise. A broken promise is a customer's approach, and it shows weakness in the character of a business organization, just as unreliability does in an individual.

Most inaccuracies come from not really listening to what is said, or not really seeing what you are doing. The chewing of gum, tobacco or pipe or a law exerciser should be eliminated. The world is now pronouncing them vulgar, unbusinesslike, useless and silly. Keep ahead of your employer and of the board of health in this thing.

Having promised to obtain goods or information, or to deliver goods by a certain time, do not start the thing a-going and trust to luck for the Do your own part in full, and then follow up to know that the rest is moving on schedule time. Remember that the thing specially promised and of special importance needs watching. "Accidents" and life's various "hindrances" get after just those things with a keen scent.

If your business is to wait on customers, be careful of your dress and appearance. Do your manuevering before you reach the store. A tooth brush is a good investment. A salesman with a bad breath is dear at any price. Let your dress be quiet, neat and not too fashionable. To have a prosperous appearance helps you inwardly and helps the business.

Give each customer your whole attention, and give just as considerate attention to a little buyer as a big one.

If asked for information, be sure you have it before you give it. Do not assume that the location or fact is so now because you once thought it so.

Don't misdirect. Make your directions so clear that they will be a real help.

There are houses known by courteous telephoning. Telephone courtesy is a big thing, as courtesy always is. Loss of temper ruins nothing.

The less you require looking after, the more able you are to stand alone and to complete your tasks, the greater the reward. Then if you cannot only do your work, but also intelligently and effectively direct the efforts of others, your reward is in exact ratio.

And the more people you direct, and the higher the intelligence you can

DOG GOES OVERBOARD; SAVES GIRL SHIPMATE.

Child Had Fallen From Father's School into the Bronx River.

New York, Nov. 3.—The ship Nancy Brown, captain Tom Brown's floating pride, had just cast off at her dock ready to drop down stream for a return trip to Perth Amboy, when a scream, followed by a splash, caused the crew to leap.

Rever, the ship's dog, a big Newfoundland, gave a yelp, leaped over an open hatch and into the water. A moment later he reappeared, holding something in his mouth. Paw over paw he swam, holding his head as high as he could, but managing to keep above water the head of Elsie Brown, the captain's 10-year-old daughter, who had fallen overboard.

Capt. Brown and his mate, James Maddigan, plunged into the water but were unable to overturn the dog until he had dragged the child to dry land, where he began licking her chilled face.
